Agritech solution development and testing opportunities for startups and farms

EIT Food's Testfarm-program expanding to Nordics and call is open for startups until 24.11.2024.

EIT Food's Testfarm-program aims to promote technological development in agriculture and is hosting the hands-on testing program for transnational startups, across Europe. In the program, selected startups will be connected to real-life farms and enabled to test their agritech solution, together with the industry experts (from Jamk) and with end-user (farmer). The program will cover 3 000€ worth of testing and travel costs for the startups and 1 000€ for the engaged farm.

- If you have promising agritech startups (approx. TRL 4-5) in your network, please share this opportunity for them. The program call is open until 24.11.2024.
- Also, if you have forerunning farms (any kind of production) that would like to test new agritech solutions to their farm, Jamk is building a testfarm community where the agritech testing opportunities are shared. In practice the interested farms are attached to a mailing list, which is used for opportunity sharing.

Registration does not entail any obligations, merely possibilities. It is a great chance to stay on top of the agritech development!

Jamk is honored to serve as the Nordic coordinator for the EIT Food's Testfarm-program, if you have any questions, please contact riikka.kumpulainen@jamk.fi. We would appreciate if you could share these opportunities to your startups and potential test farms!

We are sharing information of these possibilities on several occasions. We are hosting a webinar of the Testfarm-call 4th of November (at 15-16 EET), and we can be met at SLUSH in our side event Harvest or Die 20th of November.
